Serial Cop Murders

Drawn by the recent serial murder of police officers, the FBI has had an increased presence in Omaha.

Despite the continued slayings, FBI investigators have felt confident in the progress of their search. The killer has appeared to work in a consistent and methodical pattern.

The latest victim, however, has fallen outside this pattern and has forced the FBI to reevaluate their preconceptions.

In addition, a local reporter and her photographer have discovered apparent facts about the case that cast all the crimes in an entirely different light.

This story line would certainly make a sensational news story. It might make an even more sensational film.

Written by Derek Baker, Renee Montemayor and Rick Brayshaw, "Ulterior Motives" follows just this storyline and two Omaha Police Department detectives who are hunting for the serial killer.

Baker is also the producer for the film that began filming Tuesday, June 6 in downtown Omaha and Bellevue.

The film will feature local TV news and radio personalities and local music talent.

Baker said that he is excited about the showcase that the film will provide for area actors, musicians and local businesses.

The plot twists have proven to be so sharp and hairpin that the actors and others involved with the film have had to sign non-disclosure agreements concerning what they know about the plot. The actors are not even able to discuss the film amongst themselves.
